MRS. NATION COING. The following letter explains itself. IN JAIL, Topeka, Kan., Feb. 20. EDITOR BAXTER NEWS:

At the request of some of our leading citizens I will be in Baxter Springs about March 1st if I can obtain my liberty by that time. I shall bring my hatchet and Cherokee county will be as free from rum when I get through with it as Wichita is free from virtue. I have no connection with the W. C. T. U. or ministers of the gospel who are afraid to use battle axes in time of war. I am not after Baxter Springs particularly, but expect to make my headquarters with my old Medicine Head friend, Mr. Collins and other friends and do good work in Galena, Columbus and Weir City.

I understand the county officers are all in favor of temperance and will support the home defenders in their efforts to crush the rum power. Fraternally yours, CARRIE NATION.

MORE FOOLISHNESS.

Another prohibitory campaign has broken loose in Kansas and Baxter Springs has necessarily tailed on to the movement. It is true we have less cranks in Baxter than in any other town, but we are not in the habit of staying out of any game that concerns the welfare of the people, and on this question we are perhaps rather equally divided.

After twenty years of force and failure, one would suppose we had had enough of prohibition, but here is a large element in our midst falling into line to make war on our drug stores with a permit. While our drug stores may not be quite up to date in some respects, yet they fill a long felt want and attract quite a large country trade to our city. Could we have well kept, high licensed saloons it would be better for all, but we cannot have saloons legally, and from a moral as well as a business standpoint we cannot do without drug stores.

We will acknowledge the present system has done great harm to the state in many ways. It has practically given us a set of uneducated illiterate incompetent bar keepers. Where is the old time bar keeper with his white apron, pleasant smile, dextrous fingers, rosy cheeks and red nose? Gone to Missouri where his services are not appreciated or out in the short grass country bootlegging whiskey. Who would not like to see those talented and skillful young men back with us once more. Who that now has to drink out of a dirty bottle or a fly-specked glass but would be glad to see a happy return of the whiskey cocktail, the rum punch, the Tom and Jerry, the egg nog, the Sherry cobbler and the most glorious of all the mint julep?

(The editor of this paper is in Oklahoma this week and he has left us in charge, but we will not be responsible for any acts or hold ups he may perpetrate.)

Prohibition is the cause of most of the crime in Kansas. Our jails would be comparatively empty were it not for prohibition. Ask almost any prisoner you may find "what brought you here, poor man?" and he or she will invariably reply "Prohibition." It has driven more people to the insane asylum than cigarettes or opium. It has seared more consciences and caused more kidney, liver and bladder trouble than all other causes combined. There is hardly a man in Kansas today who is not seriously affected with liver, kidney or bladder trouble. Examine the drug store records, Christian people, and satisfy yourselves.

Many of the uninitiated think the people perjure themselves. This is not true. Kansas is full of these diseases and they seem to be contagious; they prevail most generally in prohibition states and attack all classes of people, Christians and heathens alike. Nothing can completely eradicate them, but a half pint of whiskey often reduces and a cold quart of beer alleviates temporarily. Can we afford to abolish our drug stores and confine ourselves to skin milk and alkali water while these disorders prevail? Certainly not! It would not only destroy the lives and happiness of our people, but would drive our trade to Galena and other towns where remedies are sold openly and without restraint over the bar. We don't know the editor's views on this subject, but he is not in town this week.

OLD BLUE.

In the summer of 1897 J. C. Naylor arrived in Cherokee county and took up a claim on Tar creek seven miles west of Baxter Springs. He had a wife, a yoke of steers, a plug horse and quite an assortment of china. He built a small house on the creek and started in as a farmer and stock dealer. As he was away from home most of the time his wife asked him to get a dog of some sort for protection and company.

At this time Baxter Springs was on a big boom and hundreds of emigrants were daily passing through the city on their way to the golden West. Every mover had on an average three cur dogs and as many of them strayed away and were left behind, the city was overflowing with stray dogs. Naylor selected an old long legged, mangy blue, cur dog, tied him behind his wagon and drove through town on his way home. Other dogs seeing old Blue behind the wagon fell in line and when he reached the suburbs of the city he had some fifteen or twenty dogs of all kinds and conditions, from the trained bloodhounds of an Uncle Tom show to the pet poodle and lascivious lap dog.

Naylor was proud of his menagerie, but when he arrived home and Mrs. Naylor came out horrified at the sight, and with uplifted hands asked him what he was going to do with all that lot of scawling clogs, he saw he had overdone the thing. But Naylor is a genius in his way and he told his wife to get him a tomato can and he would abate some of those dogs.

He filled the can with pebbles, fastened it securely on old Blue's tail and turned him loose. Mrs. Naylor by the way had just finished putting supper on the table and every piece of china ware was displayed as well as a lot of tin ware and utensils. The table was a crude affair, constructed by Naylor himself and was quite wobbly with its load of provisions and crockery.

Old Blue, as soon as he found himself detached, made several circles around the house, followed by the entire pack with Naylor encouraging him with an occasional war whoop. As the other dogs closed in on him he sought refuge in the cabin and after a few inside circles ran under the table, overturned it demolishing all the china and supper and then with a few parting yelps like a coyote broke for Blue Mound with the velocity of a cannon ball. The other dogs followed close behind and as the entire pack passed from view and the faint tinkle of the tomato can could be heard, no more. Naylor turned to his wife and exclaimed in tones not loud, but deep: "Well! I'll be damned!"
